The decree deals only with Roman Catholic worship, but it emphasizes the importance of Scripture in liturgy and advocates more preaching.

Scripture and preaching are strongly emphasized by Protestants. Some non-Catholics feel Catholicism does not pay sufficient attention to them.

The decree sets general principles and guidelines. Special minority, and Assembly man by national and regional bishops conferences, will work out the actual changes, including Assemblyman Glenn Pommerening of Wauwatosa, Republican

Final '63 Opportunity Throughout Nation Will be Saturday

-The Peace Corps has announced that Saturday will be, the last opportunity this year to take the placement test and qualify for the spring training pro-

The test will be given at their main post office in both Appleton and Oshkosh, beginning at 8 30 a.m. Saturday. The noncompetitive aptitude tests will be administered at about 860 locations throughout the United States Saturday.

The test is to be given in the Civil Service room on the second floor of the Appleton Post Office, and in Room 207 of the Oshkosh Post Office.

Test Lengths

For most applicants, the placement test will take about or French will be asked to take an additional one-hour language achievement test.

To become a volunteer, an applicant must take the test and also submit a Peace Corps questionnaire. Those who have not done so will be asked to complete the questionnaire immediately after the testing. No applicant may take the test a

Controversy Arises In Naming of School

NORTH BRANFORD, Conn. (AP)-The town meeting was surprised to find itself deadlocked on a proposal to name the new high school for the late President Kennedy.

Only token opposition had been anticipated in North Branford but the vote on the proposal Monday night was 55-55. Moderator Pasquale Young broke the deadlock by voting for John F Kennedy High School.

Opposition was led by parents of pupils who had ordered class rings and sweatshirts bearing the name "North Branford High School."

Future Plans Decide How Much Needed to be Married

BY MARY FEELEY Dear Miss Feeley:

to get married?

G.J.H., Freeport, N.Y.

Dear G.J.H.: First tell me what the girl is like.

Wouldn't it be a tidy state of affairs if a young man could feed that question into a mechanical brain and get the answer in two seconds! Mine is going to take longer - for the simple reason that I have to translate statistics into people before dollars can make sense.

The statistics point unvieldingly to these: a man should be prepared to provide shelter, food, and clothing for two, with an educated guess as to how it can be stretched all of a sudden to cover three. He should have at least a modest savings account. He should be able to carry some life insurance.

All that, of course, is a mere skeleton of the framework of

What does the man want in life? Will the girl he marries pursue that goal with equal fervor? What standard of living has he set up in his own mind, to begin with - and has he painted the picture honestly to his bride-to-be? And who's going to rule the roost? Don't think that last question is all in fun. While it takes two people to build a satisfying future, one of them is going to have to have the last BY ANNE ADAMS word in a tight situation.

the right source. It is generally believed that there are more scholars hip opportunities available to young people than are actually applied for. So I think you can investigate the sources mentioned with an optimistic approach. A number of books and pamphlets about scholarships and college costs are available at public libraries, so be sure not to overlook this bet. Also ask local clubs, men's and women's, fraternal orders, labor unions, and banks to give you a steer.

Performance By Symphony Is Pleasing

Lawrence Concert Features Smooth Dual Piano Piece

BY DON VORPAHL

The Lawrence Symphony Orchestra reached deep into the well of symphonic literature Tuesday night in Memorial Chapel to bring up a draught of fresh, crowd-pleasing music for its debut concert this season Conductor Kenneth Byler and his 65 citizen-musicians and Lawrence scholars also invited Clyde Duncan and Theodore Rehl, faculty pianists, for a performance of the "Concerto in D Minor for Two Pianos and Orchestra" by Francis Poulenc. The choice of painists and composition proved wise as the guest artists snapped off one of the smartest performances of the season.

Out of Touch

One of the problems in Viet Nam during the last regime—and a problem that probably will bother the new rulers, too is the lack of liaison between the leaders and the people. To some extent it is because the rulers have been educated abroad and consider themselves members of the anstocracy if not royalty. They are really much more like the Europeans they have thrown out of their nations than like

David Hapgood, writing in Harpers, indicates that this is a problem in the majority of newly independent African countries too. He calls the leaders "Africa's new

Some of these leaders have recognized the dangers to their leadership and their nations. A Senegalese official pointed out that "we must rid ourselves of the city intellectual's mentality that looks at the peasant with contempt." But some of the peasants have the same sort of contempt for their lives and want to escape at all costs.

There is a tremendous difference between the living standards of the African peasant and his own government official. In some African countries, 95 per cent of the people grow crops and manage to scratch out enough for perhaps $40 or $50 2 year. The government politician may earn only about $4,000 a year, small enough by Western standards, but this is bolstered by a government owned home and a lot of other free rides at government expense. Unlike the United States, where high salaried business leaders take government positions at considerable personal financial loss, the African politicians learn early that their "power and rewards depend almost exclusively on holding government jobs."

Unfortunately to date this has been a

vicious circle. Many Africans, educated in Europe, want the trappings and the prestige they had associated with the Europeans. They are conversant with European culture but ignorant of their own or hold it in contempt. And too often their education has included very little in the way of economics partly because of lack of interest, partly because the colonial masters handled those affairs themselves.

Clearly this means slow economic progress, if any at all, and more reliance upon government for positions of prestige and wealth. That there is wealth is indicated by the reports of accounts in Swiss banks growing against the day when a leader may fall from power.

The gap between leaders and peasants also is one reason for the foolish spending of money. It is more important for the African leaders to have such prestige symbols as luxury air liners, television stations and gaudy embassies in other countries than to try to get rid of starvation or disease in the back country.

Hapgood writes that the greatest danger in these new countries is not the personality cults in vogue or even the suppression of differing political views or government criticism. Since the back country is despised even by those who live there. young men flock to the cities. Often they are prepared for nothing except farming but efforts to place them on government farms are generally useless since they see nothing but retrogression in such plans. Although most of these countries lack food and agricultural advances, the young men seek the riches they think are in the cities.

To some extent there is little to be done in such nations except wait awhile. And vet there is danger in this as long as the Communists are ever on the alert to stimulate and exploit unrest and dissatisfaction.

But it is equality of taxation that is at issue here. If the state can tax all of its residents, as it does, to provide a huge budget for the purchase of these lands. it should also tax all of them to replace the local tax value of those lands to the local district when they are removed from the tax rolls as they become publicly owned.

To deny such payments in lieu of taxes is

Joint Chiefs Should Have Own Ideas

From The Buffale Evening News The reason given by the administration for opposing 4year terms for members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff aren't very convincing. Deputy Defense Sec. Gilpatric argues dren were taken by a bomb that a uniform 4-year term, applying to all the chiefs, would unduly restrict the President's appointive powers and waken the principle that military commanders should support fully an administration policy once it has been made.

These arguments simply fog the real issue dramatized by the administration's decision to bypass Adm. Anderson for a second two-year term as Chief of Naval Operations and to extend the term of Air Force Chief of Staff LeMay for only one year. The bill sponsored by Rep. Carl Vinson, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, would establish four - year terms. Any service chief is subject to dismissal for reason, so it is hardly accurate to argue that a 4-year tenure --- as Con-gress originally intended - is any more restrictive than a bob-tailed 2-year term. The real difference in the longer tenure is in its inhibiting effect on the use by any administration of its reappointing power after two years as reward or punishment for any service chief who speaks his mind forcefully on matters of policy.

A military commander should not have to be an apple-polisher. . .

There is no reason why there shouldn't be a Fascist

Senate Party Leaders Ideal Vice Presidents

Johnson Selection Urged as Restraining Influence on the Younger Jack Kennedy

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON - By a for- and later on? tuitous circumstance, the United States today has in Lyndon Johnson a president who, though chosen under the American elecsystem, possesses the very kind of legislative experience characteristic of the tegic position in the councils of his party, such a man is closer to the problems of the national government than are any of the governors of states or even individual members of Congress who, though they may; become prominent, are not selected by their colleagues to be party leaders.

The trend in recent years. of course, has been toward the selection of a vice-presidential nominee from Congress. Sena-! tor Charles Curtis, majority leader, was vice president under President Hoover. House Speaker John Nance Garner became vice president under Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1933. Senate Majority Leader Albeni W. Barkley was elected vice president with Harry Truman in 1943. Although not his party's leader, Senator John F. Kennedy came close to winning the vice-presidential nomination on the ticket with Mr. Stevenson in 1956, but the Democratic convention delegates turned to another senator, the late Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, for the second place, who, too, was not; the party's leader. Few of these men, however, had the popularity or support inside the Congress that Lyndon Johnson enjoyed in his eight years as Senate majority leader. This correspondent, in a dispatch from the Democratic national convention at Los Angeles on July 11, 1960, wrote: The Texas senator (Lyndon)

Johnson) is the real choice of the delegates here. There's no doubt about it. Every conversation with key men in various delegations confirms that appraisal. The feeling is that Johnson could surely win in November and that Kennedy is likely to be beaten by Nixon.; The contrast is between a youthiui candidate and an experienced leader."

Mr. Kennedy turned out to be a man of more maturity than former President Truman and other Democratic spokesmen at the time believed him to be. but there was no question about the sentiment of many of the delegates for the senate majority leader. The late speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, who led the convention fight for Senator Johnson, kept emphasizing Mr. Johnson's legislative experience in his talks with the delegates.

Johnson Nomination But how did Senator Johnson happen to get the vice-presidential nomination? Primarily, Mr. Kennedy recognized the political value of having a southerner on the ticket. as there was doubt whether all the south-, ern states would go Democratic. In a dispatch from Los Angeles on July 20, 1960, this correspondent wrote: "When word was being passed around the convention hall last Thursday that Senator Johnson had accepted Senator Kennedy's offer of the vice-presidential nomination, a close adviser of the Texas senator approached this correspondent and said:

"I know you will be surprised about this, but last night several of us had a talk with Senator Johnson and discussed very frankly what we were up against. Bear in mind that the labor leaders fought Johnson for the top place on the ticket. and they don't like him. Bear in mind that Jack Kennedy will make a campaign on virtually a socialistic platform. He may be less radical if elected, but he will be plenty radical in the campaign. What is that going to do to us in the south during

One of the problems in Viet Nam during the last regime—and a problem that probably will bother the new rulers, too is the lack of liaison between the leaders and the people. To some extent it is because the rulers have been educated abroad and consider themselves members of the anstocracy if not royalty. They are really much more like the Europeans they have thrown out of their nations than like David Hapgood, writing in Horpers, indicates that this is a problem in the majority of newly independent African countries too. He calls the leaders "Africa's new elites".

Some of these leaders have recognized the dangers to their leadership and their nations. A Senegalese official pointed out that "we must rid ourselves of the city intellectual's mentality that looks at the peasant with contempt." But some of the peasants have the same sort of contempt for their lives and want to escape at all costs.

There is a tremendous difference between the living standards of the African peasant and his own government official. In some African countries, 95 per cent of the people grow crops and manage to scratch out enough for perhaps $40 or $50 a year. The government politician may earn only about $4,000 a year, small enough by Western standards, but this is bolstered by a government owned home and a lot of other free rides at government expense. Unlike the United States, where high salaried business leaders take government positions at considerable personal financial loss, the African politicians learn early that their power and rewards depend almost exclusively on holding government jobs."

Unfortunately to date this has been a

vicious circle. Many Africans, educated in Europe, want the trappings and the prestige they had associated with the Europeans. They are conversant with European culture but ignorant of their own or hold it in contempt. And too often their education has included very little in the way of economics partly because of lack of interest, partly because the colonial masters handled those affairs themselves.

Clearly this means slow economic progress, if any at all, and more reliance upon government for positions of prestige and wealth. That there is wealth is indicated by the reports of accounts in Swiss banks growing against the day when a leader may fall from power.

The gap between leaders and peasants also is one reason for the foolish spending of money. It is more important for the African leaders to have such prestige symbols as luxury air liners, television stations and gaudy embassies in other countries than to try to get rid of starvation or disease in the back country.

Hapgood writes that the greatest danger in these new countries is not the personality cults in vogue or even the suppression of differing political views or government criticism. Since the back country is despised even by those who live there, young men flock to the cities. Often they are prepared for nothing except farming but efforts to place them on government farms are generally useless since they see nothing but retrogression in such plans. Although most of these countries lack food and agricultural advances, the young men seek the riches they think are in the cities.

To some extent there is little to be done in such nations except wait awhile. And yet there is danger in this as long as the case. People have no hesitancy in speaking of the right-wing radicals as "Tascists." for this is what they are. To speak of them as "extreme conservatives" is a foolish contradiction in terms.

And it seems quite plain to me that there are many more Fascists and Fascist sympathizers in the United States than there are Communists and their sympathizers - unless, of course, you care to adopt the Fascist line and suggest that everyone who favors staying in the UN and retaining Social Security is a Red fellow-traveler.

It has no business masquerading as "Americanism" or "conservatism" or "patriotism," when its whole philosophy of man is based on a hate-filled exclusiveness that would shock and affront the conservative American patriors who founded this country.
